As established in the Treaty of Fontainebleau, winners and losers agreed to establish Napoleon's residence on the island of Elba, for those times in the hands of the French and where they would have at their disposal two mansions

Napoleon's stay on the Island of Elba

Even during the somewhat turbulent period before he landed in Elba, which shows a man's true nature is revealed only when he falls, Napoleon starts his exile in Elba in a letter he writes on April 27th 1814 from the Frejus to General Count Dasleme, Commander on the Island of Elba: Dear General Dalesme, circumstances have left me no choice but to give my throne in France up, and hence also my ...

Visiting Napoleon's villas in Elba Island | Visit Tuscany

Napoleon Bonaparte, after his defeat at Leipzig, was forced to move to the island of Elba where he lived in exile for nine months, from May 4, 1814 to February 26, 1815. He left an important sign in the history of the Tuscan island, suddenly put at the center of European political events: he studied local resources, reorganized agriculture, transport and trade, and even designed Elba's flag ...

Napoleon Bonaparte's exile on the Island of Elba

The Island of Elba is world famous not only because of its crystal clear sea, or the colours of its nature or the richness of its minerals, but also thanks to a great name: NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Elba

Elba (Italian: isola d'Elba, pronounced [iˈzola ˈdelba]; Latin: Ilva; Ancient Greek: ??????, Aithalia) is a Mediterranean island in Tuscany, Italy, 10 kilometres (6.2 mi) from the coastal town of Piombino, and the largest island of the Tuscan Archipelago.
