The natural beauty of these people and the way that they are clearly not only a part of Nature but have a reverence and deep love for it, is evident on every single page. Those who lionize the sour-faced skeletons that parade down cat-walks from Milan to Paris, and are held up as paragons of pulchritude to the rest of us, should look at this book. They will see and understand real beauty possibly for the first time in their fashion-fuelled lives.
